

JOURNALISM AND MASS COMMUNICATION

Journalism and Mass Communication

<http://www.greenlee.iastate.edu> (<http://www.greenlee.iastate.edu/>)

The Journalism and Mass Communication Major prepares students for careers that involve all aspects of news and information. Emphasis is placed on generating ideas, organizing, writing, editing, and presenting information for various media platforms and audiences. Students work with advisors to develop a program of study that prepares them for work in communication-specific areas, including broadcast media, magazines and/or newspapers, photojournalism, science communication, visual communication, and digital media. Coursework in this major focuses on writing, research, digital and emerging media, and professional abilities. Students are required to complete a capstone internship experience to practice and refine their skills.

The Greenlee School of Journalism and Communication prepares students for communication fields. The school offers four majors:

- Advertising (<https://catalog.iastate.edu/collegeofliberalartsandsciences/advertising/>) Bachelor of Arts (ADVRT)
- Journalism and Mass Communication Bachelor of Science (JLMC)
- Public Relations (<https://catalog.iastate.edu/collegeofliberalartsandsciences/publicrelations/>) Bachelor of Science (PR)
- Sports Media and Communication (<https://catalog.iastate.edu/collegeofliberalartsandsciences/sportsmediacommunication/>) Bachelor of Arts (SMC)

The school coordinates one interdisciplinary major:

- Digital Storytelling Bachelor of Arts (<https://catalog.iastate.edu/collegeofliberalartsandsciences/digitalstorytelling/>) (DSTR)

In addition, the Greenlee School offers a 4+1 program allowing students to complete their B.A. or B.S. and earn an M.S. in Journalism and Mass Communication in fewer semesters.

Founded in 1905, the unit was one of the first Journalism programs to be accredited in 1948 and continues to be one of the longest continuously accredited programs in the country. Accreditation is based on the principle that students need a broad-based, liberal arts education and solid core courses within the discipline. Journalism students may seek an additional major or minor in Digital Storytelling, but may not pursue a second major or minor in Advertising, Public Relations or Sports Media and Communication. All Journalism students are required to take an additional major or a minor.

Student Learning Outcomes

Students who major in Journalism and Mass Communication will:

- demonstrate proficiency of the ACEJMC Professional Values and Competencies;
- generate, research and organize ideas to create compelling coverage and analysis of complex stories;
- produce professional-quality content for appropriate media platforms and audiences;
- understand the freedoms of the First Amendment;
- apply journalism skills and principles to serve the public.

The Journalism and Mass Communication Major

To receive a Bachelor of Science degree in Journalism and Mass Communication, a student must earn at least 120 credits. A minimum of 72 credits must come from courses other than ADVRT, JLMC, PR, or SMC. At least 50 of these credits must come from the liberal arts and sciences. Overall, at least 45 credits must be from the 3000 level or above.

The degree requirements allow for a minimum of 34 credits and a maximum of 48 credits to be taken in ADVRT, JLMC, PR or SMC. These include:

JLMC 1100	Orientation to Journalism and Communication	1
JLMC 2400	Principles of Journalism	3
JLMC 2010	Reporting and Writing for the Mass Media (C+ or better)	3
One of the following two courses with C+ or better:
JLMC 3020	Intermediate Reporting and Writing for the Mass Media	3
or JLMC 3030	Writing for Electronic Media
3000-level ADVRT, JLMC, PR or SMC Electives		9
JLMC 4600	Law of Mass Communication	3
JLMC 4620	Media Ethics, Freedom, Responsibility	3
4000-level ADVRT, JLMC, PR or SMC Electives		6
JLMC 4990A	Professional Media Internship: Required	3
Total Credits		34

Journalism and Mass Communication majors are also required to take:

STAT 1010	Principles of Statistics (or another approved statistics course)	4
-----------	--	---

As majors in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, Journalism and Mass Communication students must meet College of Liberal Arts and Sciences (<https://catalog.iastate.edu/collegeofliberalartsandsciences/#lascollegerequirementstext>) and university-wide requirements (<https://catalog.iastate.edu/collegescurricula/>) for graduation in addition to those stated above for the major.

University Requirement: Students in all ISU majors must complete a three-credit course in U.S. Cultures and Communities, as well as a three-credit course in International Perspectives. The approved course lists are found at the following web addresses: (U.S. Cultures and Communities) <http://www.registrar.iastate.edu/students/div-ip-guide/usdiversity-courses> (<http://www.registrar.iastate.edu/students/div-ip-guide/usdiversity-courses/>) and (International Perspectives) <http://www.registrar.iastate.edu/students/div-ip-guide/IntlPerspectives-current> (<http://www.registrar.iastate.edu/students/div-ip-guide/IntlPerspectives-current/>). Students must also demonstrate their communication proficiency by earning a grade of C or better in ENGL 2500.

College of LAS Requirement: Minimum of 120 credits, including a minimum of 45 credits at the 3000 level and above. You must also complete the LAS world language requirement, LAS career proficiency requirement, and any unmet ISU admission requirements.

Greenlee majors and minors cannot take ADVRT, DSTR, JLMC, PR or SMC courses pass/not pass.

Minor or Additional Major: Students are required to fulfill a secondary area of expertise. This requirement can be met by declaring a minor or an additional major outside of the Greenlee School of Journalism and Communication. Journalism students may seek an additional major or minor in Digital Storytelling, but may not pursue a second major or minor in Advertising, Public Relations or Sports Media and Communication. All Journalism students are required to take an additional major or a minor. Students may seek a Designated Area of Concentration (DAC) made up of 21 credits with at least 12 credits from the 3000 level or above. All courses for the DAC must be taken outside of ADVRT, JLMC, PR or SMC.

Juniors can apply to a concurrent degree program and earn a B.S. and an M.S. in Journalism and Mass Communication in fewer semesters. Contact the Director of Graduate Education for more information on the Greenlee School's 4+1 Program.

Greenlee majors and minors cannot take ADVRT, DSTR, JLMC, PR or SMC courses pass/not pass.

The Journalism and Mass Communication Undergraduate is an LAS Minor. In addition to university policies governing minors (<https://catalog.iastate.edu/academics/#degreeplanningtext>), LAS minors require at least 6 credits in courses numbered 3000 and above, with a grade of C or higher.

Concurrent Undergraduate and Graduate Programs

The Greenlee School offers three concurrent degree programs:

- B.A. Advertising/M.S. Journalism and Mass Communication
- B.S. Journalism/M.S. Journalism and Mass Communication
- B.S. Public Relations/M.S. Journalism and Mass Communication

Enrollment in the Greenlee School's concurrent degree programs enables students to complete coursework for the undergraduate and graduate programs on a five-year accelerated timeline – rather than the typical six-year timeline for the two degrees. Graduates of the concurrent degree program will be prepared to face today's rapidly changing media environment and contribute to society by becoming leaders within the communication field. Upon completion of the undergraduate program (bachelor's degree), students can choose between two tracks in the master's program (master's degree): one for students who desire specialized study in communication theory and research and one for students who wish to develop or strengthen their professional and strategic communication skills. At the master's level, the school is well known for developing practitioners and scholars in science communication, political communication, multicultural communication and media industries. The ISU Graduate Handbook outlines policies and requirements for concurrent degree programs. Concurrent degree students must complete all academic requirements and required coursework for both degrees.

To be eligible for a concurrent degree program, currently enrolled ADVRT, JLMC or PR students must 1) be defined as seniors by their number of cumulative ISU credits (90 credits or more) and 2) have successfully completed JLMC 2010 (required of all three undergraduate majors) with a C+ or better. Before beginning graduate coursework, concurrent degree candidates must formally indicate their interest by contacting the Greenlee School's Director of Graduate Education. Interested students must then apply to the master's program no later than March 1 of the year prior to taking graduate coursework. Application and admissions requirements for the master's program (<https://greenlee.iastate.edu/graduate/graduate-admissions/>) are the same for concurrent students as those applying to the master's program after completing an undergraduate degree. A thesis or creative component is required for all concurrent degree students.

To receive a Bachelor of Science/Arts degree from the Greenlee School in Advertising (<https://catalog.iastate.edu/collegeofliberalartsandsciences/advertising/>), Journalism or Public Relations (<https://catalog.iastate.edu/collegeofliberalartsandsciences/publicrelations/>), a student must earn at least 120 credits and complete all required courses. To receive a Master of Science degree from the Greenlee School in Journalism and Mass Communication, a student must earn at least 32 credits and complete all required courses.

Preference for assistantships will be given to students who have completed all of their undergraduate coursework.

Student Learning Outcomes

1. To develop an understanding of the central issues and current research important to the field of journalism and communication.
2. To be familiar with the breadth and depth of the journalism and communication profession.
3. To be able to communicate acquired knowledge in the field.
4. To be aware of ethical issues that pertain to the field of journalism and communication.
5. To develop the ability to design and present an independent and meaningful research project.

Graduate Programs

Master of Science

The Greenlee School of Journalism and Communication offers work for a Master of Science degree in Journalism and Mass Communication.

Majors plan a program of study in one of two tracks:

I. Academic track – The School offers advanced academic preparation in communication theory and research, leading to the Master of Science degree. Graduate work prepares students to use and contribute to research and scholarship in the field of communication. This track requires a thesis based on original research, which must be defended successfully before a committee at the end of the program.

Areas of research emphasis include: science and risk communication, media effects, advertising, public relations, political communication, communication technology, law and ethics, international communication, visual communication and emerging media.

II. Professional track – The School offers advanced professional study in Journalism and Mass Communication leading to the Master of Science degree. Graduate work prepares students for professional careers in a variety of mass communication fields. Students with limited training or experience in Journalism and Mass Communication may include skills courses in their programs, but the credits for those courses may not count toward the graduate degree. This track requires a creative component, which must be defended successfully before a committee at the end of the program.

All graduate students must complete 32 credits for graduation, comprised of four core classes, at least two electives outside the Greenlee School, and at least four thesis or creative component credits. The following core courses account for 10 credits of the needed 32 credits.

JLMC 5010	Theories of Mass Communication	3
JLMC 5020	Fundamentals of Communication Research Methods	3
JLMC 5920	Introduction to Graduate Study in Journalism and Mass Communication	1
JLMC 5980	Seminars in Mass Communication

Each student selects elective courses based on the student's area of emphasis and career goals, in consultation with the student's major professor and Program of Study Committee.

Student Learning Outcomes

1. To develop an understanding of the central issues and current research important to the field of journalism and communication.
2. To be familiar with the breadth and depth of the journalism and communication profession.

3. To be able to communicate acquired knowledge in the field.
4. To be aware of ethical issues that pertain to the field of journalism and communication.
5. To develop the ability to design and present an independent and meaningful research project.

Graduate Minor

The Greenlee School graduate program offers minor work for students majoring in other departments. The M.S. minor requires:

JLMC 5010 and two other courses in Journalism and Mass Communication for a total of 9 credits taken within the Greenlee School.

Concurrent Programs

The Greenlee School's concurrent degree programs enable interested students the opportunity to complete coursework for the undergraduate and graduate programs on a five-year accelerated timeline – rather than the typical six-year timeline for the two degrees.
