

AFRICAN AND AFRICAN AMERICAN STUDIES

Interdepartmental Undergraduate Program

African and African American Studies, a cross-disciplinary program in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, offers students the opportunity to explore the experiences of African Americans and African American contributions to American culture. Students in the program analyze and learn about African and African American experiences through the study of history, literature, art, religion, and society. They gain knowledge and develop skills and sensitivities to help them function effectively in today's diverse society.

African and African American Studies at Iowa State University is an expanding program. Many of the courses in the program satisfy general education requirements in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, the human relations requirement for teachers, and the university's U.S. Cultures and Communities or International Perspectives requirements; please consult official lists. Students can minor or even design their own Interdisciplinary Studies major with an emphasis in African and African American Studies. Relevant courses are offered through various departments.
